

Building permit

A building permit is needed to build a new structure, modify or expand a structure into a new dwelling or premises, for example a furnished attic. Walls and fences also require building permits, and to modify a buildings appearance substantially.

Exceptions for these rules and more information about the regulations you'll find in the guide for building permit. No later than three weeks before construction begins, a building notification shall be submitted to the Building Committee.

Construction shall begin within two years and completed within five years from the decision date.
